Dear Mr. Bigby:

Thank you for the opportunity to contribute an endorsement to the program for your teaching circus. As I told you last year, I was very favorably impressed with this program and am happy to be a part of it this year.

I would suggest something like:

"The performance we saw in 1976 was excellent - the students were all top quality performers. My family loved it."

HISTORY OF THE LEWIS & CLARK YOUTH CIRCUS

One evening after school 6 years ago, my wife mentioned that the Clackamas High School Circus was coming to town. She suggested that we go and see what it was all about! Serendipidously I went, looking for a second class tumbling show. Much to my delight, we found a fantastic circus performance. I saw it in the faces of the students and the crowd that they were actively and willingly achieving through creative experience. The accent of the program focused around the cooperative effort rather than the competitive effort.

After the performance I found that I would like to try to reconstruct the program to fit my situation. I introduced myself to the director, Dave Williams. During the same school year, numerous trips were made to Clackamas to watch Dave and students practice and perform.

Reams of pictures were taken of both equipment and acts. Scale drawings were also made of the equipment. The following year materials were purchased and other people with special talents donated their time to fabricate the circus equipment. There was some gear that was not able to be constructed by people in the community. Thus, contacts were made with professional circus people back East to make what we needed.

The first year, putting approximately $1500. of my own money into equipment, and Dave Williams loaning me various pieces of equipment, I began training kids in circus acts. Our circus traveled several more times to Clackamas High to watch and try some of the acts done by the high school students. That spring we felt we were ready to give a performance. Money was borrowed to produce an eight page program, tickets, tape music, and buy material for costumes. With the kids, parents and some of our staff members behind me, we staged five performances. Our shows were met with surprising accolades, and there has been no let up since. The money that was made from the performances paid our debts and what was left over was put into a special circus fund to maintain and repair equipment, buy costumes and pay for any expenses the circus incurred. Any new equipment must be taken care of at my own expense.

As the years have progressed, so have the size and quality of the show. Our first performances were comprised of 10 acts and that has more than doubled in magnitude. The second season, a ESEA Project Title III Teacher Incentive Grant of $1000.00 was awarded to build more equipment. The Lewis and Clark School district installed more floor and ceiling anchors for the rigging. More 8mm films and video tapes were taken of circus acts and our library has grown to 30 8mm films and 7½ hours of video tapes. The grant money, plus some of my own, was also directed to the purchase of the balancing and shoot through ladder, bicycle built for 7, unicycles, rope, four inch double blocks, wire rope, juggling clubs, fire batons, and material to make a small safety net. Our circus music is recorded on ½ inch tape. Our music library now consists of more than 40 different recordings.

In 1974--75 we made our first round trip and staged 3 performances at the Seaside Civic Center, as well as staging 2 shows in our own gymnasium. The students found they had to adapt quickly to 2 entirely different situations. The ceiling was 25 feet high in contrast to our 16 foot ceiling in our gym. The spacious auditorium allowed us to put up all our rigging, so that our performance could proceed smoothly with minor rigging changes. In 1975-76, we again staged six shows in the Seaside Civic Center and our first and opening show was held in our own gym. This year we will be appearing exclusively at the convention center.

DOUBLE ADAGIO TEAM

Besides just teaching skills there are many other facets of putting on a program, and help is often needed. Some of the strongest support and encouragement has come from the parents of circus students. These parents help make costumes, provide transportation, help maintain rigging and props, act as chaperones, style hair for the girls, sell tickets, and help with publicity.

Thanks a million, Mom & Dad.

Getting Up In The World

The effect the circus has had on the audience might best be described by a response I received from a person who watched our show one afternoon last year: "As a person who thinks often and seriously about learning (What it is, and what helps it to happen, how to provide it,) I was most impressed by the circus. The experience and the fruits of learning were vividly evident that afternoon. The students were accomplished at their tasks, but they performed without any of the hard, glossy surfaces too often covering adult entertainers. Their faces were smiling, their eyes intent on the experience that they were having. Listening to them talk amongst themselves, they spoke of each other's acts with pride and comadery. During a particularly difficult act, their teacher stood in the arena directing and encouraging them with a beaming face, the face of a proud parent, rather than the face of a critical or fearful teacher expecting error. The students responded in full measure and so did the audience. We felt we had all just learning to walk, so great was the delight. Clowns are not my favorite part of a circus; nonetheless I was impressed to find eighth grade humor given its ritual, as surely as the great Chaplain gave adults theirs. This is truly a mark of respect for the students. Too often in a school situation, or any situation involving adults for that matter, he is made to feel that his jokes are the final proof of his natural inferiority and lack of sophistication. It is rare for adolescents to find situations in which physical contact between the sexes can be matter of fact. It is rare for adolescents to find situations in which they can touch in order to help and to assist one another. For some reason it is more socially acceptable for them to hit, guard, block or compete with one another. Boys must learn to hit boys, girls must learn to out-fox other girls. This is the usual "Physical Education" we give them, a great sorrow to me as I teach my daughter to substitute touching gently for touching roughly. As we left the circus I thought back to the film of the children's circus in Peru, Indiana. Lewis and Clark had measured up to it; Out of the many parts, the many separate acts they had created a whole; the joyous world of circus. They had returned the respect of their teacher with respect for each other-they had become a troupe. John Holt, among others has pointed out that too often what we teach in schools is performance, rather than learning. Ironically, while I watched the circus students at Lewis and Clark School performing, what I saw was the glorious experience of learning and its attendant pleasure for any student--feeling competent in what one loves to do.

TRAVEL WITH THE CIRCUS KINGDOM FOR A SECOND YEAR

Two years ago, two of our circus alumni, Heidi Parker and Diana DeMander made application, were accepted and toured with the Circus Kingdom. That summer they traveled through more than 26 states, Washington D.C. and two Canadian Provinces.

The summer of 1976, Heidi and Diana returned to the Circus Kingdom, performed on the road show, and with the second troupe at Busch Gardens in Williamsburg, Virginia. In September the two troupes combined to tour the North Eastern States and more of Canada. Heidi returned to Astoria High to complete high school. She then rejoined the show in February for the winter tour in Florida.

The Circus Kingdom is meant to be a kind of traveling "community of brotherhood" which would stress cooperation, sharing of religious and humanitarian values - a "living example" of peace and love, but also "the very best" in the act of the circus.

The majority of their performances are played in locations where professional shows would not venture; prisons, ghettos, orphanages, and county homes. Public performances were also held to pay for its equipment and maintain its expenses.

DIANA DeMANDER

Miss Clatsop County 1977

The Lewis and Clark Youth Circus is very proud to present Diana Lynn Demander, Miss Clatsop County 1977. Diana won the Miss Clatsop County title during the official Miss America Preliminary Pageant competition last spring. Diana used one of her circus acts for the talent presentation in the contest. Diana skillfully performed a three minute Spanish Web routine and was assisted by Heidi Parker. Diana has performed with the Lewis and Clark Circus since our circus began. Even though she graduated from Lewis and Clark, she has never left our circus family. When she is home from her travels with "Circus Kindom, she attends practices to help circus students with their acts. Because of her circus experience, she has been able to assist our students with the skills for their routines and showmanship for their performance. The Lewis and Clark Youth Circus salutes Diana Lynn Demander and wishes her the best of luck in the Miss Oregon Pageant.
